Bill McKibben recently wrote, "We are in an unprecedented and dire emergency, with the planet's temperature increasing quickly and dangerously; if we can't bring it under control, then it poses an existential risk to poor and vulnerable people around the planet, and then to everyone else—not to mention most of the other species, and all the generations that come after us."

Housing

Perhaps the most powerful step that San Francisco can take to reduce greenhouse gas emissions is to build more housing. Because of San Francisco's sustainable transportation options (walking, biking, transit), mild climate, green sources of electricity, strict green building standards, and low per-capita use of water, new housing built here has a lighter environmental footprint than new housing built almost anywhere else in the state. Did you support Proposition D and oppose Proposition E in the November 2022 election? Read more on our blog about prop D and prop E.

Tell us about your past environmental work, activism, etc. (200 words max)

I basically have done little environmental work other than Ocean Beach Clean Up, and recycling. We are very careful in our house to turn off lights and recycle. We take short showers, and we always have all our leftover food etc put in our Compost Bin.

I have worked on Environmental Legislation as VP & Legislative Director of the California Alliance for Retired Americans (CARA). I led the fight to have the environment one of CARA's priorities. I work closely with groups in the Central Valley on cleaning up the environment through CARA!
